C&S Funds Construction of Ramp For Handicapped

Sometimes numbers tell stories better than words ever can, take in consideration the number one hundred and sixty five. It's three more than the number of games in a professional baseball season, sixty three less than the number of seats in the US senate, and the exact number of times that US Airman Bryan Fyffe jumped from an airplane prior to a life altering accident. On May 12th 1996 Bryan fell unconscious during a parachuting exercise and was awoken just in time for a late parachute deployment. He crashed hard onto a Humvee and the impact resulted in severe injuries. In the time since that day Bryan's injuries have progressed to the point of paralysis. Unfortunately the sacrifices of our county's service men and women can not be measured by numbers and they aren't done justice by words, but they should be appreciated by all of us. At Courage and Sacrifice it is our mission to seek out people like Bryan, and help ease their burden with the means provided to us from our gracious sponsors. Recently it was brought to our committee's attention that Bryan did not have ramp access into his home. Bills had ran up overtime due to his disability, and he did not have the means to execute the necessary renovations. With that said we are proud to announce that we have commenced construction on Bryan's house. Thankfully, our donors have contributed greatly over the last two years, and we were able to use a portion of those proceeds to begin construction on this project. Over the next month we will fund an extension onto Bryan's property, with ADA compliant features and proper accessibility. Unfortunately stories like Bryan's are all to familiar, but with the work of our foundation and the continued support of our donors we hope to continue helping our country's heroes in and doing our best to honor their sacrifices.
